July 25, 1914.

C. E.

Southern Textile Bulletin,

Charlotte, N. C.

Gentlemen:

I read with interest your issue of July 23rd, and noticed on page 10 an article pertaining to a gentleman by the name of Pink. This party was here in 1903 and "worked" us, as I recall it, for either $100 or $200 for this wonderful formula, ever since which time we have been expecting to hear from him in different parts of the country.

I presume our particular case is outlawed by the statute of limitation, but I can vouch for the fact that his formula is about as valueless as his character seems to be, and I hope that the Greenville people who now have him will fix him so that he is locked behind the bars for some time to come.

Your editorial entitled: "The Right Policy" I agree with to a great extent.

From my experience during our labor troubles, which have been extending over a period of about nine and a half weeks, I have come to the conclusion that the best way to help kill off a strike is to refuse to give them newspaper notoriety. I believe, however, in the case of an organization such as the I. W. W., that they ought to be hammered, publicly and privately, as their principles and theories are based entirely on lawlessness, and I hardly feel that the policies suggested by you with reference to this particular organization would produce the desired effect. I am not writing this letter with a view to taking strong issue on the subject, but these are merely my personal opinions from the experiences we have gone through for some weeks. No doubt labor unions live on newspaper notoriety, as that is a very essential part of the fuel to keep their fires burning.

Yours very truly,

Prest.